

Projects on Speech and Feeding Development in Individuals with Down syndrome

The University of Wisconsin-Madison is currently enrolling participants (ages 5-16 years old) to participate in 2 different projects on speech and feeding development in Individuals with Down syndrome. Each project involves only 1 visit to the University of Wisconsin campus in Madison, WI and there is the possibility that both projects can be completed in 1 day if you are coming from out of town. You may also choose to participate in only one of the projects if you prefer.

Families will be compensated $20 for participating in each project and free parking is close and readily available. You will also receive information about some of the assessments completed during the session to have for your own records.

If you are interested in participating or would simply like additional information about the projects
